Malaysian Home Cooking

We would like invite you to join Malaysian Home Cooking Class and bring back an authentic taste of Malaysia!

Malaysian cuisine is a unique fusion of Malay, Chinese, Indian and Baba-Nonya flavors, drawing upon our country's rich history as an historical crossroads for explorers and traders from around the globe.

We will allow you to bring Malaysian cooking back to home and share our family recipes, which we have savored and perfected over generations.

Hands-on classes are available from Monday to Saturday and presented in English by entertaining Malaysian instructors. Different menu is available on each day of the week, and provide detailed explanations of ingredients and cooking methods. You will prepare 3-course lunch individually at your own cooking station, usually consisting of an appetizer, main course, side dish, and dessert.

This Malaysian Home Cooking class nestled in the jungle just outside of Kuala Lumpur city centre and overlooking the lush Penchala Hills, with roosters crowing and monkeys scampering through the distant canopy, our cooking school has the feel of a kampung / village.

Note: cooking class not available on local festive season, such as Chinese New Year & Eid Al-Fitr

Yuit Cheong Coffeeshop Kota Kinabalu

Established in 1896, Yuit Cheong was one of the few shops found in Jesselton (now known as Kota Kinabalu). Yuit Cheong is considered one of the oldest coffee shops in town.

Yuit Chong remains a popular coffee shop for those looking to enjoy a quick cup of kopi O and home made buns especially during tea time. Yuit Cheong is also known for its satay, with a selection of chicken or beef. The tender skewered meat is not complete without the peanut sauce which complements it perfectly.

For individuals are just looking for a light tea time snack, there is always roti kahwin (you can order it freshly sliced or toasted). Roti kahwin (which literally translates to 'married bread') is a basic sandwich prepared with generous portions of butter and kaya (coconut jam). But the real magic is in the bread itself: a homemade recipe made from scratch – a family recipe that dates back to 1904!

Pair your food with their delicious Teh C (tea with milk) or Kopi C (coffee with milk). The taste of their Teh C and Kopi C is just right where you can taste the bitterness of tea or coffee and the mixture of the creamy milk. Other snacks that you can find in this coffee shop are the soft red bean paste pastries and 'Lao Po Bing' (sweetheart cake or wife cake).

Yuit Cheong is all about authentic kopi, family-owned recipes and a true local kopitiam feel that spans generations.
