

Little Kitchen @ Nyonya

Tucked in the heart of George Town's Noordin Street is Little Kitchen @ Nyonya. The charming restaurant housed in an old two storey shophouse with a distinctive heritage façade, serves home-cooked Nyonya dishes.

This style of shop houses are referred to as Straits Eclectic Shophouses, built between the 1890's to 1940's. They are colourful and elaborately decorated and usually have three pairs of wooden shutter windows with decorative arches. The pillars and panels have ornate plaster decoration. These earlier shophouses were built by the more affluent Chinese settlers so they usually have very ornate decorations to show their status.

Several items that have disappeared off the face of Penang Nyonya cuisine is found in this restaurant, much to the delight of everyone!
